Introduction

1. Introduce the lesson by providing students with a handout or project the following quotation on an overhead transparency: (See larger version in the Resources section at the end of this document.)

   It was eighteen ninety-six, and I was just sixteen
   And Altgeld ruled in Springfield, Illinois,
   When there came from the sunset Nebraska's shout of joy:
   In a coat like a deacon, in a black Stetson hat
   He scourged the elephant plutocrats
   With barbed wire from the Platte.
   The scales dropped from their mighty eyes.
   They saw that summer's noon
   A tribe of wonders coming
   To a marching tune.

2. Engage students in a discussion of the quotation using the following questions:

   • Who is John Altgeld?
     [He was a reform Democrat governor of Illinois in 1890s].

   • Define the following terms: scourged, elephant plutocrats, and scales.

   • To whom is the reference, “He”? (W.J. Bryan)

   • What key national political event occurred in 1896?

   • Does the author seem to support reform? Why or why not?

   • What reform movements are active in Nebraska and the U.S. from the 1870s to 1914?

L1  The Progressive Movement in Nebraska & the U.S.

This lesson plan was funded in part by the Cooper Foundation, Abel Foundation, and the Nebraska Humanities Council.

The Process

1. Instruct students to read accounts of the Progressive movement in their history textbooks or related sources.

2. Direct students to access the Nebraska Studies Website at http://nebraskastudies.org/ and click on the 1900-1924-time period. Then instruct students to click on the icon “Turn of the Century 1900 Progressive Movement.” and read all the information about the Progressive movement.

3. Conduct an oral classroom discussion with students over the assigned reading material. Or the teacher may distribute copies to the students of selected topics listed under “Progressing into the 20th Century” and then conduct an oral discussion of specific topics. The following questions could be used as a guide for oral discussion:
   - What were the objectives of the Progressive movement?
   - Did the Grangers, Farmers’ Alliance Party, Progressive Party and Populists support the basic goals of the Progressive movement?
   - Were the third political parties of this era successful in achieving their goals? Why or why not?

4. Have students access the National Archives Analysis Worksheets in the Resources section of this document. Review the various analysis formats with the students.

5. Share a political cartoon with students to introduce the ideas of symbolism, humor, exaggeration, and caricature in political cartoons. Provide students with a copy of the political cartoon titled “The Sacrelegious Candidate” found on page 139 of the following Nebraska History issue: “William Jennings Bryan and His America.” Nebraska History, Vol. 77. Nos. 3 and 4. Fall/Winter. 1996. Pp. 118-193. Or the teacher may select a different political cartoon if s/he does not have access to the Nebraska History magazine. Use the following questions as a discussion guide to aid students in delving deeper into the art of editorial cartoons.

   Editorial Cartoon Questions:
   - Symbols are used in cartoons to visually present abstract ideas. Many such as Uncle Sam are widely recognized. What symbols are used in this cartoon? Can you think of any other symbols you have seen pictured in political cartoons?
   - Cartoonists employ humor to make powerful statements in an effective, less heavy-handed manner. Does this cartoon use humor to make its point? If so, how? Is it sarcastic? Ironic? Ridiculing?
   - Exaggeration is what sets editorial cartoons apart; they must grab the reader and deliver a message in a few seconds. What is exaggerated in this cartoon, and what purpose does it serve? Caricature exaggerates or distorts a person’s prominent feature(s) to allow the viewer to identify him or her quickly. How is caricature used in this cartoon?
6. Assign individual or groups of students to use the National Archives Sound Recording Analysis Worksheet or Motion Picture Analysis Worksheet located in the Resources section at the end of this document to analyze one of the following videos located in the Media section of the 1900-1924 timeline (http://nebraskastudies.org/en/1875-1899/roots-of-progressivism/): “History of the Grange,” “the Populist Party” Farmers’ Alliance,” or “History of Bryan’s Career.”

7. Conclude your discussion of the Progressive movement in Nebraska and on the national level by having students in groups or individually review orally or in writing answers to the following questions: What were the objectives of the Progressive movement on the state and national level?

   • Were the objectives of the Progressive movement achieved on either level of government? Why or why not?

   • Why were third parties such as the Grangers, Farmers’ Alliance, Populists and Progressives appealing to people at the state level and national level?

   • What goals of the Progressive movement were achieved on the state or city level in Nebraska?

Learning Advice

1. Have students identify and/or define the following terms after they have had the opportunity to read the information contained on the Nebraska Studies Website concerning the Progress movement and related topics in their history textbooks or assigned readings:

   16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th Amendments  Robert M. La Follette  Australian ballot  nonpartisan commission form of city government  William Jennings Bryan  The Farmers’ Alliance  Populist Party direct election of senators  cooperatives  free coinage of silver  prohibition Interstate Commerce Act  direct primary  Oliver H. Kelley  recall national elections of 1896, 1900, 1904, 1908, and 1912  Eugene Debs  Patrons of Husbandry  referendum Grange  initiative  progressive movement  trust monopoly muckrakers  Eugene Debs  Progressive Party  woman suffrage
   Sherman Antitrust Act

2. The teacher may or may not want to also assign students readings or activities related to the following topics—"Limited Voting Rights for Women Approved in Nebraska" and “Nebraska Prohibits Alcohol.” These topics are also included in the 1900-1924-time period, and are issues discussed by supporters of the Progressive movement. There are lesson plans available under these topics as well.

3. Require all students to become familiar with the National Archives worksheets on how to analyze primary documents, video/audio productions, photographs, and political cartoons in the Resources section of this document. Use the National Archives Written Document Analysis Worksheet to analyze Bryan’s Cross of Gold Speech [http://www.nebraskastudies.org/documents/534/0605_0508gold.pdf] and model to students how to engage in analysis of primary resources.
4. Review with students what the causes and effects of the Progressive movement were on the state and national level. Emphasize the role of Progressive leaders such as Robert La Follette. Discuss the role of the Progress Party in the election of 1912.

5. Teachers could use an additional lesson plan, Women Suffered to Achieve Suffrage, located in the Teacher Activities section of the 1900-1924 timeline to stress the role of the women’s rights movement during the Progressive Era.

Conclusion

Students will have learned what the goals of the supporters of the Progressive movement were and how successful they were in achieving those goals. They will further realize the role played by third political groups (Grange, Farmers’ Alliance, Populists, etc.) who supported the reform measures of the Progressive movement. Students will become aware that even though third political parties were not very successful in supporting political candidates who were elected to federal offices, many of their goals were achieved because the two major political parties adopted those goals (federal income tax, direct election of senators, state referendums, recalls, and initiatives, laws regulating railroads, etc.) and supported legislation to make them a reality. Furthermore, students will be able to compare and contrast reform movements in Nebraska with reform movements on the national level. Finally, students will have developed skills to analyze primary resources and political cartoons.

Assessment Activities

One or both of the following activities could be used to assess student knowledge.

Activity Number 1: Analytical Essay

Instruct students to do a written analysis of a minimum of 500 words comparing and contrasting the successes and failures of third political parties to achieve their goals in Nebraska and on the national level during the time period 1870 to 1912. Include documentation, a bibliography, etc. Use a rubric to assess student knowledge. Teachers can create their own rubric or use one of the following rubrics:

Activity Number 2: Multiple-Choice Assessment

Print out enough copies for each student of the Progressive Movement Multiple Choice worksheet in the Resources section of this document.

Answers to the Multiple Choice assessment activity:

Possible Extension Activities

1. Acquire a copy of the following Nebraska History magazine from the Nebraska State Historical Society or check the local library for a copy: “William Jennings Bryan and His America.” Nebraska History. Vol. 77. Nos. 3 and 4. Fall/Winter. 1996. Reproduce copies of the political cartoon titled “Bound to Stick” which is located on page 191. Have students use the Cartoon Analysis Worksheet or the hints for Interpreting Political Cartoons located into the Resources section at the end of this document to analyze the political cartoon.

2. The teacher can access the National Archives “Teaching With Documents Lesson Plan: Political Cartoons Illustrating Progressivism and the Election of 1912” at http://www.archives.gov/education/lessons/election-cartoons/ and provide copies of the political cartoon titled “Progressive Fallacies” and have students use the National Archives Cartoon Analysis Worksheet in the Resources section of this document to analyze the political cartoon.

   [Hint: the man sitting on the couch is Robert La Follette who was a progressive governor of Wisconsin. The caption “Progressive Fallacies” suggests that Teddy Roosevelt is only acting like he is supporting the Progressive Party goals. T.R. is stealing the Progressive Party nomination away from La Follette]

4. Access the Library of Congress website https://www.loc.gov/search/?in=&q=lesson+plans&new=true&st= Select a lesson (such as “Voices for Votes: Suffrage Strategies”) under the category “Progressive Era to New Era, 1900-1929 and use one of the lessons to further analyze the Progressive movement.

Guideline for Using Political Cartoons to Teach Social Studies Concepts

The use of pictorial representations can be an effective way to teach social studies concepts. Pictorial representations include cartoons, pictures, and diagrams. Cartoons are the most symbolic of these pictorial representatives because they usually contain satire, exaggeration, and frequently humor. The editorial cartoonist can replicate life with a few strokes of the pen, with stark directness. The reader needs to have familiarity with basic social studies (economics, geography, history, political science, etc.) concepts in order to interpret the cartoons and understand the symbolic representations. The goal of using cartoon interpretation activities is to provide students with practice in dealing with editorial cartoons in an analytical and critical way. Most social studies standards stress the importance of students developing the skills necessary to analyze documents and images.

The following four-step model is provided as a guide for introducing editorial cartoons to illustrate social studies concepts.

1. Provide background information for the social studies concept to be portrayed. For example, students will need a basic understanding of imperialism before a cartoon on this topic can be analyzed.

2. Provide background information on editorial cartoons. Discuss the purpose of editorial cartoons. Make the students aware that such cartoons represent a specific viewpoint. Consequently, students should become familiar with the concept of bias. Students should, when possible, research the background of the political cartoonist.

3. Discuss the nature of editorial cartoons. Stress that such cartoons rely on oversimplification in order to clearly emphasize a particular point. Distortions of individuals and objects are frequently used to add dramatic or provocative qualities. Symbolism is used to represent reality as the cartoonist views it. Students should become familiar with symbols that are typically used in the various areas of social studies i.e. Uncle Sam and the eagle for the U.S., an empty bowl for scarcity, the donkey for the Democrat Party and the elephant for the Republican Party, etc.

4. Sequential guide for teaching how to analyze political cartoons:
   a. Who is the author of the cartoon? Discuss the author’s background.
   b. What is the topic/issue of the cartoon?
   c. What social studies concept is being presented?
   d. What symbols are used?
   e. What exaggerations or distortions exist?
   f. What message is the cartoonist presenting? The teacher may want to introduce a variety of cartoons that deal with different issues as well as social studies disciplines. Students can then compare and contrast the various cartoon examples.
   g. Encourage students to discuss their reactions with their classmates. Review the social studies concepts stressed in each political cartoon.
